The EDIN/AISHE-J Special Issue was formally launched, following its publication at the end of February.
21 Jan 2015	Museums in Education: an alternative approach for Educational Developers	UCC	This event, supported by the National Forum for the Enhancement of Teaching and Learning , gave participants the opportunity to engage with an exhibition in the Glucksman Gallery, UCC, from the perspective of teaching and learning. Participants drew on the Project MUSE (Museums in Education) approach, and Howard Gardner's Entry Points to Learning to inform exploration and discussion.
Oct 2014-Jan 2015	EDIN/HECA Collaborative Project	-	EDIN and HECA collaborated on a project funded by the National Forum for the Enhancement of Teaching and Learning to identify the professional development needs of part-time academic staff in third level education in Ireland. The project's aim was to deliver a research-informed analysis of professional development needs for the target group to inform continuing professional development programmes for these staff in the future. The research was completed in spring 2014 and you can access reports on the project's website under the Publications link.
